My advice on what to bring January 6th in dc

RALLY TIME!

posted 1 day ago by 1WiggleHard +162 / -0

An American flag on a nice strong pole ;) grease the top of the pole and wrap grip tape around the bottom in case someone tries to rip it out your hand. Either or a MAGA sign on a 2 by 4. Wear heavy but mobile clothing and a helmet either a bike or a military. Wear a mask and cover any tats so you don't get doxxed. Bring a back pack with food water and a blanket. It's going to be cold and the protest could last for days. Mace, pepper spray and small knives are legal in that city. Bring cell phone power banks to charge phones. If possible use walkie talkies, don't let big brother track you. Wear goggles in case an agitator pepper sprays you and if possible a gas mask that protects against tear gas. DON'T TRAVEL ALONE, STAY IN GROUPS OF 20 AND'S IN EVENT OF ATTACK DEFEND YOUR GROUP!!! LEAVE CHILDREN AND ELDERLY AT HOME! Antifa and other agitators will be there and will attack you. DONT expect police to help you, the mayor has probably instructed them not to help or intervene. If possible make a small shield out of scrap wood and paint on patriotic logo. If possible bring a cheap grill to keep warm that you don't mind leaving behind. Be wary of eating at sidewalk. And also view map p off of city to route possible escape routes. Also bring hot hands packs to keep warm you'll complete disarm them from that point.

small knives are legal in that city

This hardly sounds like good legal advice. Could you possibly be a little bit more vague? WTF.

Good advice. And for those who truly cannot make it, please keep the ones who can in your prayers!

Also make sure the Hot Hand Packs aren't from China.

Low quality goods like this can cause chemical burns.

Body cams. I'd suggest one on your back too.

Multi-tool. Legal to carry, unlimited uses, and makes a hell of a defensive weapon in a pinch, even as a simple fist pack.

I'd advise against full/face motorcycle helmets, they cut off your peripheral vision.

Wear loose-fitting, flame resistant work wear like Wranglers or Carhartts. Make sure you're wearing long sleeves. I like hickory logging shirts, but they'll stand out in the city. Wear a poly/spandex base layer (compression shorts and shirt) to handle perspiration. Leave the tennis shoes at home, and wear combat, hunting, or work boots that are easy to run in.

Have several back-up burner phones.

If all else fails and you get separated from your group, carry some commie swag you can put on to blend in with the enemy. If you find yourself in that situation, make sure to film the shit they don't want the public to see, if you can do so safely.

One more thing. Don't bring anything you can't afford to leave behind.

A helpful quick guide for those who are not familiar with the layout of the city - this is almost like downloading the map directly into your brain - very easy to remember and can be useful to help keep you oriented:

DC is broken up into 4 quadrants - NW, NE, SE, SW. The U.S. Capitol is the confluence of these 4 quads. So, the building itself is in all 4 sections. The Capitol is at the intersection of East Capitol St and North Capitol St.

The streets are laid out like a grid. If you leave the Capitol and go north (or south) along North Capitol st, the first crossroad you will encounter is A st. Continuing north (again, or south) 1 block and you will reach B st. One more block and you will reach C st. It continues this way until the alphabet expires (skipping the letter J - arguments exist that claim J was skipped because it is easy to confuse with I (sometimes written as "Eye st) or because L' Enfant, the architect, had a feud with John Jay. In any event, not J st. So, to recap, no matter which direction - north or south - you will encounter similarly named streets. Don't let this confuse you. It allows you to quickly calculate how many blocks you are from the Capitol.

Once the alphabet has expired, you will begin to encounter streets that are two syllables and alphabetical in order., Adam's, Bryant, Channing, etc...

Moving east (or west) along East Capitol st from the Capitol, you will encounter 1st st, 2nd st, 3rd st, etc.

Naturally, this floorplan will leave you with multiple identical addresses and intersections e.g. 3rd & F st (which will allow you to calculate the address as 300 F st or 600 3rd st - depending on which side you are standing). This is where the all important directional designation comes in - NW, NE, SE, SW

There are other details/rules of thumb - streets named after states run diagonally thru the city, thoroughfares named "place" are tucked in near their alphabetical Street. But, this stuff isn't important for helping you navigate in a pinch.

Hopefully this guide will help you find your way if you get off your path.

Good luck, stay safe. Come back with your shield or on it!

You all caps phrases are the most important IMO. No kids, no elderly! And stay in those large groups, don't get separated.
